

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT BRINGS TO EARTH HIS FIRST PLANE

Reports of American air victories reaching here today in official cables contain an account of the first air victory of Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt, son of the former President.

The youngest son of Theodore Roosevelt brought to earth his first plane in a fight north of Chateau Thierry on the afternoon of July 10, it was announced.

With three companions he was flying 5,000 yards high eight miles within the German lines. The American machines became separated. Flying alone, Lieutenant Roosevelt saw three machines at a distance. Taking them to be his companions, he flew in their direction with the intention of rejoining them.

When he got within a few yards, however, he discovered that they were enemy airplanes. Lieutenant Roosevelt immediately opened fire. After a stream of tracer bullets he overpowered the fuselage of the machine, it went into a spinning nose dive and fell through the cloud bank 2,000 feet below.

The two remaining planes attacked Roosevelt, but after a hot fight he managed to escape and return to his own aviation field unharmed.

Other American air victories are contained in the same dispatch. A squadron of American planes penetrated the enemy territory for a long distance on the same day and secured much valuable information. The planes flew at a height of 5,000 yards for most of the trip. All the Americans returned safely.

Lieut. James A. McHenry, of Brooklyn, has won his fifth aerial victory, and is now officially accredited as an ace, and Lieut. David E. Putnam, of Brookline, Mass., has brought down his tenth German. His tenth victory has been officially verified. It was won on June 30.

ERWIN ADDRESSES

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS

George W. Erwin, new associate general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. war work for the Washington district, delivered his inaugural address to nearly 100 of the secretaries in this vicinity at a conference at the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday.

Mr. Erwin made associate general secretary in addition to Dr. Y. E. Yarnell, because from now on William Knowles Cooper, general secretary, will spend much time in New York, as a member of the war work cabinet of Dr. John R. Mott, and as the director of the speaking campaign for the forthcoming drive for $112,000,000 as a war work fund for the association.

"The numerous points of service in this district challenge us to increase our variety of service," Mr. Erwin said.

$45,000 BONDS STOLEN AT RAILWAY STATION

LENOX, Mass., July 11.—Coupon bonds of the value of $45,000 were stolen from the Adams Express Company on the way to Boston and New York last month, it has been revealed here.

About two weeks ago the Lenox Savings Bank shipped thirty $1,000 bonds of the Boston and Northern Street Railway and five $1,000 bonds of the Old Colony Street Railway from Lenox to the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company. The bonds were received for at Lenox station and at the transfer point at New Haven. The package was left on a truck outside the New Haven express office and disappeared.

At the same time was stolen $10,000 of Meriden city bonds, which had been shipped from Meriden in another package for New York.

The Boston and Northern Street Railway and the Old Colony bonds were 4% of 1924. The Meriden city bonds were 5% due in 1923.

SHRINE INITIATES 98.

Ninety-eight candidates were inducted into Almas Temple, Mystic Shrine, last night at the Gayety Theater. Acting Potentate Roe Fulkerson, in the absence of Potentate L. Whiting Ester, who is confined to his home by illness, directed the ceremony. About ninety of the candidates were army men. Delegations and officers from other cities were present.

What Is Nuxated Iron?

Physician Explains—Says Public Ought To Know What They Are Taking—Practical Advice on What To Do To Build Up Your Strength, Power and Endurance and Increase the Red Blood Corpuscles.

The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually and that so many physicians are prescribing it as a tonic, strength and blood builder in weak, nervous, run-down conditions has led to an investigation of its merits by designated physicians and others whose reports indicate its great importance to the public generally. Among these is the statement made by Dr. James J. Sullivan, of the Westchester County Hospital, Westchester, N. Y., who writes: "When one patient after another began asking my opinion of Nuxated Iron, I resolved to go thoroughly into the subject and find out for myself whether or not it possessed the real value claimed for it by its manufacturers and attested to by so many prominent people. This is exactly what I believe every honest, conscientious physician should do before prescribing or lending his endorsement to any worthless preparation. It is a waste of time and effort to attempt to recommend it for the welfare of our patients. A study of the composition of the Nuxated Iron formula so impressed me with the therapeutic efficacy of the product that I immediately tested it in a number of obstinate cases. So quickly did it increase the strength, energy and endurance of the patients to whom it was administered that I became firmly convinced of its remarkable value as a tonic and blood builder. I have since taken it myself with excellent results. There are thousands of delicate, nervous, run-down folks who need just such a preparation as this but do not know what to take. Therefore I have urged its use in the most emphatic manner possible. This complete formula is now to be found in newspapers throughout the country. It is a simple, practical, and effective formula in the form of iron peptonate of a special standard and glycerophosphate which is one of the most costly tonic ingredients known. It may be said that the manufacturers may be said to have put the most expensive form of iron peptonate, where they could have put the same quantity of actual iron in the tablets at less than one-fourth the cost and by using metallic iron they could have reduced the cost to less than one-twelfth, but by this cheapening the product they would undoubtedly have impaired its therapeutic efficacy. In my opinion a careful examination of this formula by any physician or pharmacist should convince him that Nuxated Iron is the best and most effective of all the iron preparations known to medical science. It excels anything I have ever used for building up the system and increasing the red blood corpuscles thereby enriching and fortifying the blood against the ravages of disease."

Congress Did Yesterday

The Prohibitionists "Square the Issue" for the Control of the Senate—They Overrule the Chair and Vote As a Party of the Future—Administration Policy Disregarded by Southern Prohibitionists—The Bill for the Control of Wire and Wireless Systems Reported and Waiting Action—The House Ways and Means Committee.

By W. V. BYARS.

The history of the United States, as it is to be made after the war, is the one point of paramount importance in the history made by the United States in the war itself. No matter how deeply we may feel interested at present in deciding destiny for our Czech-Slovak friends after the overthrow of the Austrian empire, or in the control of the valleys of the Euphrates and Tigris as this will decide the control of India by our British allies, the final results of our "world politics" in reaction on our own lives will concern us long after we have concluded that our friends in Europe may be trusted to take care of themselves.

It seems to have been decided yesterday in the Senate that immediately following the war, or not later than the next Presidential campaign, in any event, the same impulses which made prohibition a policy of imperialism in Russia, will force a similar climax in the United States for the "new era" which began in 1893.

The question now seems to be one of the impulse of domination, where the power to control exists, or seems so certainly to exist that argument against it on the ground of principle is overruled in the beginning.

Under such conditions, with the impulse of control dominant, those who resist domination on the ground of principle or any other ground appear as "stubborn, sulen people, half devil and half child." The "urge" to compel them to improve becomes uncontrollable, as part of the impulse at domination. The power to think from any standpoint other than that of domination is lost. Impulse overcomes personal judgment. Old standards of principle, of rights, of tolerance are ignored, and finally the impulses of an entire era come to issue in its third and fourth generation. For us, this is not now a question of theory but of fact. And it seems to be decided that the impulses of coercive control of others are now stronger than those of party or "policy."

The fact which makes yesterday's proceedings of the Senate seem far-reaching in their importance is that under the control of impulses stronger than personal judgment, a majority of the Senate voted for the issue of prohibition and against either its evasion or its postponement. The vote disclosed common impulses controlling the Southern States and those of the Northwest for compelling the submission of all dissenting States—as of all dissenting minorities.

By a vote of 36 to 33, the prohibitionists of the Senate overruled the decision of the Chair that the Gore committee's prohibition amendment to the supplementary agricultural appropriation bill was "general legislation" (a "rider") which under Senate rules could have no rightful place in an appropriation bill. This was a squared issue, with all false pretenses of "food conservation" stripped away.

When Senator Saulsbury, in the chair, announced this ruling on the point of order made by Senator Penrose, Senator Gore, who as chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee, was urging both the appropriation bill and the prohibition rider, in disordered the action of the Chair, as clearly in accord with the rules of the Senate.

Of this there is so little doubt that probably the most extreme prohibitionist of the Senate, in the chair as Senator Saulsbury was, would have given the same ruling. It may be assumed that any prohibitionist who quibbled through the afternoon from the floor, if put in the Chair, would have overruled his own quibble. Regardless of the strength developed by impulse, Senatorial honor is not extinct. Probably there was not a man in the Senate who really wished the ruling the Chair to be other than it was.

Any other ruling from the Chair would have shamed the Senate as a whole. On the appeal from the Chair, a representative vote was cast for and against prohibition as a paramount issue, with a prohibition majority thus developed in spite of the fact that several prohibitionists like Gore and Smoot voted to uphold the rules of the Senate, while Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, Senator Simmons of North Carolina, and Senator Martin of Virginia, as "Administration Democrats," attempted to evade the issue by supporting the ruling of the Chair.

Regardless of how this occurred, the development from it is that the "Administration majority" and the prohibition majority in the Senate, with the Solid South as the core of both, cannot be "co-ordinated and unified" under Administration control. The prohibition majority in the South itself is stronger than the Southern Administration majority. It also appears that prohibition is stronger in the Senate than the Administration, or than the Democratic party or the Republican party in opposition to it.

The quibble against the ruling of the Chair was that while riders to general appropriation bills might be against the rules, the supplementary agricultural appropriation bill which Senator Gore's committee was urging was "not a general appropriation bill," but was a special bill to "stimulate food production." Senator Jones of Washington made this point with great learning and at great length just after listening to page after page of dollars and dollar marks for the Department of Agriculture's extraordinary activities of all kinds. When his attention was called to this, he said it made no difference and continued to argue that it was a "stimulation bill," not an appropriation bill. Other prohibitionists argued in the same way, during the afternoon. As against them, Senator Smith of Georgia and Senator Simmons of North Carolina, for the Administration, supported the ruling of the Chair. When Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, reviewed the specific appropriations on the bill, each with a special purpose, and with a general total of $19,000,000, the quibble that the bill had a special purpose, and was not a "general appropriation bill," could no longer conceal the real purpose of the prohibitionists. This was to make the appeal from the Chair a first decisive demonstration of their strength in the Senate.

In this they succeeded, from the South, Senators Martin, Simmons, Smith or Georgia, Ransdell of Louisiana, Swanson of Virginia, and Woodward of Alabama voted to sustain the Chair. Senators Overman and Sheppard, presumably "Administration Democrats" above everything else, led as prohibitionists in the combination of "South and West," which voted to square and force the issue.

With the test made, the Senate listened for ten minutes to Senator Phelan of California, as he argued in favor of an amendment exempting wine. He read California telegrams, putting at $14,000,000 the value of the ripening wine grapes whose growing would otherwise lose them. With this amendment still pending, the Senate adjourned.

The House resolution giving the President power to take over and control wire and wireless systems during the war was reported to the Senate from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, by Chairman Smith. Its immediate consideration was objected to, and no attempt was made to force it before the decision on the prohibition rider had been reached. It may be held back until it is apparent that there is no danger of a telegraph strike, as its opponents assert. Its passage within the next ten days is probable.

The House Ways and Means Committee gave a public hearing to Meyer E. Rothchild and other manufacturing jewelers, while as business for its session, it has the responsibility of finding something better than the plans and specifications sent it from the Treasury. The majority of the committee is unquestionably in favor of the plan when it needs further guidance from the Treasury, it knows how to ask for it.

Friday Remnant Day Is Always a Day of Profitable Shopping

Almost every section of the store brings its quota to the front for clearance on these Weekly Remnant Days. Of course, in many instances quantities are limited, but in all cases the savings are exceptional and are only obtainable because of our policy to close out small lots, incomplete assortments as to sizes and styles, instead of allowing them to accumulate in our stocks and clog them up. It is, therefore, important that you shop as early in the morning as possible. May we also remind you of our Saturday all-day closing, in accordance with our new summer business hours?
